0:0:05 – 0:0:16 – Don Patel, Community Service Award Winner, speaking directly to camera in office.
Audio – Volunteering, I think it's the nature of humans, where we are supposed to, not only do the things by yourself, but for the community and for the nation.

0:0:17 – 0:0:28 – Cathy Lawlor, Community Service Award Winner, speaking directly to camera.
Audio - It really doesn't take that much time. I always say that to my people. Honestly, if you have, like an hour a week, an hour a day, whatever it takes, any little bit helps. So, you can always find the time, I think.

0:0:29 – 0:0:50 – Anastasia Orlando, Community Service Award Winner, speaking directly to camera.
Audio - And I can see the result of it and how it can benefit all of us, the neighbourhood, the community, even our children. So that's why I volunteer, because I know that getting awareness out on this charity within our community can make a difference in everybody's lives.

0:0:51 – 0:1:03 – Amol Kapoor, Community Service Award Winner, speaking directly to camera.
Audio - It does mean recognition, but it's also motivational in some way to keep doing the job you're doing in the community, do more next year, maybe. It's just that it was a bit of motivation for me.

0:1:04 – 0:1:31 – Rose Sorbera, Community Service Award Winner, speaking directly to camera.
Audio - If there's one word to describe it, it's joy. And that's pretty much what I get out of it. I get so much from it, as much as I give back. So, it is infectious, and I see it in people that are actually involved, and it's such a beautiful thing to witness and experience. To be a part of it is something that I will always continue to do because it's part of who I am.

0:1:32 – 0:1:46 – Steven Schmeiser, Community Service Award Winner, speaking directly to camera.
Audio - If you believe in something, you make the time and effort to do it. By serving on TRREB boards and panels, I stay current in everything going on in the market.

0:1:47 – 0:1:56 – Charlene Williams, Community Service Award Winner, speaking directly to camera.
Audio -This makes me feel like I'm part of a community, that I'm working towards something. So that would be a huge reason why I volunteer.

0:1:57 – 0:2:15 – Roman Havlin, Community Service Award Winner, speaking directly to camera.
Audio - You get to make an impact and that to me is really important. I've been able to contribute positively to TRREB and that's extremely rewarding.
